Listening

A. The first half of Poll's answer to a question

Listen and find the eight mistakes.

Well, I don't know...this is the biggest culture are many things are very different but I think food is very different. Of course, the actual food is... you know I'm English so English meal is of course are very different and Japanese meal. But I think people's attitudes and ideas about food are very different. Ah... in Japan, of course people share food are share dishes together and also food is very very people go on trips to places to meet food and you know people very well, very sensitive about food. In Britain, you have your own dish, you have all of food around plate. Of course it's rude take food from somebody else's plate are actually really rude. That's not good right? So that's took a little when I came to Japan took a little bit get use to I had get taking food from different plate and people eat in what good food in England but really food is not so as important as in Japan.

B. The latter half of Poll's answer to a question

Listen and fill in spaces.

Japanese food is much more important. People in England just want to eat something right? Get energy, going to something right? That's important. And so in Britain you know ...not yeah... attitude and feeling about food are very different I think much food much more important in Japan. Even British people eat more foods.
